1 [ to whomever reads this in the department of energy: hasn't the government learned any valuable lessons yet? yucca mountain is sacred to the shoshone peoples, so pick another site; how about one that is sacred to the american culture? i'm sure there would be a definite uproar if you did! the american government has done nothing but decimate sacred indian sites and has had absolutely no conscience raising concerning concerning their actions. it is time to stop. public apologies made after the fact do not help undo damages done to the american indians. so again, stop this outrageous proposal. ] marilyn miller, toms river, nj mreed24@thejerseyshore.net
